

Trolls

Trolls are a species of an animal which is considered to be like the tortoise. There are many different types of trolls which inhabit the land area of the earth.

Over time these creatures have evolved a shell like back which they use to curl up in. It also has some kind of protection towards itself. These nocturnal beasts have red beady eyes, hared Rhino-like skin, and minuscule hairs at the tip of their ears. These hairs act as sensors during daylight warning of approaching predators.

Rarely seen, these creatures have become the stuff of myths, however the first reported sighting was by Doctor Volt in 1997 in Wales whilst looking for samples of rock . Coming across a mossy rock moving, he was stunned; taking a photo he looked at it then looked back it was gone...

People reported back every day having sightings but they have no evidence. No one knows where and when they come out.

By Bradley Coombs

